INSPECTOR'S REPORT OF HOSPITAL.

The following report of the inspection of the General Hospital by Inspector O'Reilly was submitted: "I beg to report that I made my first statutory inspection of the General Hospital, London, on April 23. The patients in residence on that date numbered 33 males, 21 females and 9 children, making a total of 63. There is a steady upward tendency in the character of this hospital, and all its departments seem to be working with harmony and efficiency. The staff of nurses have now become well organized and is very efficient, and there seems no reason now to fear any retrogression in this department. The condition of the interior of the Hospital wasn't very tidy on the day of my visit but that was to be accounted for from the fact that the spring house cleaning was in progress, and extreme neatness could not be expected under the circumstances. Structurally there are some things which require attention, and which will no doubt receive it in due course as the means at the disposal of the Hospital Committee will permit. The most important of these is the system of heating, the building being now heated throughout with stoves. The objections to this system of heating a hospital are too obvious to need mentioning. They are unhealthy, unsafe and uncleanly. I would strongly urge that every effort be made to establish a system of hot water heating throughout this building at the earliest possible date." Referred to No. 3.

THE VOLUNTEER RECEPTION.

Ald. Green reported verbally on behalf of the Special Committee: 1, That the Council meet the volunteers at the station upon their arrival and present them with an address; 2, that on the following evening they be tendered a banquet in the drill shed, the public to be admitted at a fee the amount of which to be subsequently fixed.

Ald. Taylor thought the volunteers should be given a cold lunch with "something" to wash it down at the drill shed.

Ald. Christie—Throw in a little hard-tack. (Laughter.)

Ald. O'Meara—They have probably had enough cold victuals.

Ald. Taylor moved in amendment to the report that the address at the station, and the $1 charge to the supper, be struck out. It would not be fair to exclude any citizens in that way who wished to go to the shed offering congratulations and a warm welcome to the boys.

Ald. Kingston—I thought you were going to give them some cold shoulder? (Laughter.)

Ald. Taylor—No, something comforting.

Ald. Kingston moved in amendment, and Ald. Stringer seconded, that the address and deputation of aldermen to the station be struck out of the report. Carried.

On motion of Ald. Stringer and Scarrow, the matter was then left with the Reception Committee to deal with.

BY-LAWS.

A by-law was introduced appointing C. S. Hyman as an arbitrator on the matters arising out of the amalgamation with London East. Read three times and passed.
